CALL FOR PAPERS

Annamaria Lusardi of GFLEC, Michael Staten of the University of Arizona, and William Walstad of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln invite you to submit papers to be presented at the 6th Cherry Blossom Financial Education Institute. The deadline to submit papers is February 1, 2020. The Institute will be held in Washington, D.C., in April, which is financial literacy month as well as beautiful cherry blossom season. The National Endowment for Financial Education is sponsoring the event for the fifth consecutive year and supporting the Financial Literacy Research Award and the Rising Financial Literacy Scholar Award.

The Cherry Blossom Financial Education Institute is modelled after the National Bureau of Economic Research Summer Institute, in which researchers are invited to present their work in progress and interact with fellow scholars. The objectives of the Institute are to provide an ongoing forum for presentation and discussion of financial education research, with the aim of promoting excellent work in this field, and to foster research that informs policy and helps identify effective financial education programs.

We welcome research addressing all types of financial education: programs in primary and secondary schools, colleges and universities, workplaces, and other venues. The Institute is most interested in papers that assess the effectiveness of financial education and its influence on financial behavior and other outcomes. Academic faculty and researchers in economics and related fields studying financial education are encouraged to submit papers. We also welcome submissions of abstracts or papers from advanced PhD students. The program includes a special session dedicated to the research of PhD students and a poster session.

The Institute will be hosted by the Global Financial Literacy Excellence Center (GFLEC) at the George Washington University. The event begins the afternoon of Thursday, April 16, 2020, with a half day of presentations followed by a private dinner for the presenters. The Institute continues with a full day of presentations on Friday, April 17, 2020. Travel expenses and accommodations, up to a limit, will be covered for authors of papers accepted for presentation. This includes two nights of lodging for domestic authors and three nights of lodging for international authors.
