NEWS FLASH

November Spotlight

As a new month begins, the team at GFLEC would like to take a moment to share our November activities with you. We released a report, "Financial Literacy and Wellness among African-Americans," joint with the TIAA Institute. We also presented new research on the Financial Well-Being of Millennials at the CFPB Financial Well-Being Research Conference. And much more, as described below.

In an effort to ensure our research informs policies and programs, we have devoted time to translating our research into information that can be used by the public, commercial, and nonprofit sectors. This bridge between academic research and its application is vital if we are to improve financial literacy and financial behaviors. We hope that our work will contribute to your efforts to bring financial literacy and wellness to others.
