

GFLEC

GLOBAL FINANCIAL LITERACY
EXCELLENCE CENTER

Professor Annamaria Lusardi and GFLEC venture into a new chapter at Stanford University

The Global Financial Literacy Excellence Center (GFLEC) is excited to announce a transformative milestone in its promotion of research on financial literacy, personal finance, and financial education. Our Founder and Academic Director, Professor Annamaria Lusardi, and GFLEC will move to Stanford University. Starting this week, we will be part of the Stanford Institute for Economic Policy Research (SIEPR) and the Stanford Graduate School of Business (GSB).

Professor Lusardi's passion and dedication have been instrumental in shaping the landscape of financial literacy research. Over the past 11 years, she has led GFLEC at the George Washington University School of Business (GWSB), pioneering research-based initiatives that have promoted financial education programs, informed policy makers, and empowered individuals to make better financial decisions worldwide. Through her rigorous research and publications, she has contributed to the advancement of financial literacy globally.

As we embark on this new journey, GFLEC expresses gratitude to the George Washington University and GWSB community, supporters, and collaborators who have contributed to the center's success, helping GFLEC become the world's leading incubator for financial literacy research, policy, and programs.

We also want to extend a big thank you to Stanford University's leadership, faculty, and staff for their support in ensuring a smooth transition of our center.

We look forward to the continued growth of financial literacy and financial education under Professor Lusardi's leadership at Stanford University.

Read the SIEPR's announcement here.

Follow us on social media to get instant updates.

For more information, please contact Hanna Houdali at houdali@stanford.edu

Global Financial Literacy Excellence Center
contact@gflec.org | www.gflec.org